Lighting is, of course, a practical component of any home, but it's also a way to really express your personality and solidify your design style. If you're wondering what types of lighting trends we can expect to see making a splash in 2023, you'll want to read on for insight from the pros. Whether you're in the market for a new chandelier or are just looking to add visual interest with some table lamps, there are plenty of new looks that we can expect to see reign supreme.

LED Lighting

Many designers cite LED lighting as something we will see more of in 2023. "Indirect lighting sources with integral LEDs are finally taking hold," Pavarini says. "Gone is the allure of the visible Edison bulb and glowing filaments."

Zulma Puhl of TriVistaUSA echoes his sentiments, noting, "The lighting trend I see for 2023 is the continued use of LED lighting, not only because it continues to be energy efficient, but also because it gives designers the flexibility to creatively design a space."
